1. Claims 1 and 69-96 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

A. Claim 1 indefinite in the recitations “apparent direct interaction” and a perceived absence.” It is unclear whether the words “apparent” and “perceived” affect the scope of these claims. The words can be ignored and the claims appear to have the same meaning. The words, however, are not meaningless. The words add a subjective rather than an objective perspective to the claimed characteristics. It is unclear whether this subjective perspective broadens or narrows the claimed scope of protection.

B. Claims 69-96 are indefinite in view of the open language “said RRF has an amino acid sequence comprising a sequence.” The open term “comprising” can allow for the addition of an unlimited amount of flanking sequence, even in great amounts. It is unclear whether the claims are meant to read on the original proteins or protein complexes. If not, it is unclear how much flanking amino acid sequence is intended.

C. Base claim 69, and by reference all of the dependent claims, recite “comprising a sequence of contiguous amino acid residues . . . present in both SEQ ID NO:2 and SEQ ID NO:4 . . . wherein the sequence of contiguous amino acids residues contains four or more consecutive amino acids. It is unclear whether contiguous and consecutive are referring to the same thing. If so, the same word should be used.

2. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. § 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1 and 69-96 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as containing subject matter which was not disclosed in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to use the invention.

Claims 1 and 69-96 are broadly drawn to DNA encoding a receptor recognition factor protein. Base claim 69 is drawn to DNA encoding contiguous sequences "present in both SEQ ID NO:2 and SEQ ID NO:4.

The specification discloses that the ISGF-3 protein complex, from which the claimed sub-sequences are derived, has the following properties: activated after IFN α treatment, binds DNA regulatory elements, and complex of four proteins. Other than the basic scientific research, the specification contains no guidance as to how these characteristics are put to practical use.

In particular, even if this ISGF activity is correlated with a disease, there is no guidance as to how one could treat the disease without causing harmful side effects. Specifically, the ordinary artisan would not believe that a gene inhibition would lead to a disease treatment without guidance as to how one could inhibit the gene activity in diseased cells without also harming the same activity in normal cells.

In view of the scope of the claims, lack of guidance and unpredictability of the field, it would require undue experimentation to enable a reasonable number of embodiments within these claims.

The following paragraph, or language having the same effect, can be used to invoke the procedures of 37 CFR section 1.821(e) in which an identical computer readable form from another application is used in a given application. The paragraph should be incorporated into a separate paper to be submitted in the given application:

The computer readable form in this application, 08/100,000, is identical with that filed in Application Number 07/999,999, filed March 1, 1988. In accordance with 37 CFR 1.821(e), please use the [first-filed, last-filed or only, whichever is applicable] computer readable form filed in that application as the computer readable form for the instant application. It is understood that the Patent and Trademark Office will make the necessary change in application number and filing date for the computer readable form that will be used for the instant application. A paper copy of the Sequence Listing is [included in the originally-filed specification of the instant application, included in a separately filed preliminary amendment for incorporation into the specification, whichever is applicable].
